

MARGARET EATON SCHOLARSHIPS - 1965:

Presentation by Mrs. J. C. Eaton - May 31st

Introduction: Mr. , distinguished alumni, students, guests, . . . . .

"In accepting the alumni committee's kind invitation to attend your graduation banquet, I was impressed by the fact that the origin of the School of Physical and Health Education - so charmingly and handsomely represented here this evening - actually dates back almost sixty years.

"It was then that the Margaret Eaton School of Literature and Expression was established by the founder of The T. Eaton Company in tribute to his wife's love of the dramatic arts. Eventually, in 1941, it was incorporated with the University of Toronto and became the fine institution we know today.

"The original school has not, of course, completely lost its identity for while physical education was part of the curriculum, the scholarships first introduced almost twenty-five years ago bear the names of the two people who were so closely associated with its early history - Margaret Eaton and Emma Scott Nasmith, the first principal.

"You will be pleased to know that in that quarter century very nearly One Hundred women students have been the recipients of these scholarships - an achievement shared with equal pride, I am sure, by both the school and the Eaton Foundation which makes these awards possible.

"I am privileged to present these scholarships to-night on behalf of the Eaton Foundation, and in doing so extend my sincere congratulations and best wishes to this year's winners.

Dear Dr. Shephard:

The Governors of The Eaton Foundation have met recently to discuss the annual presentations of the Margaret Eaton and Emma Scott Nasmith Scholarships at the University of Toronto School of Physical and Health Education.

According to our records, the Scholarships have been awarded for more than forty years and, in order to meet the many demands and to serve the changes in society and our own interests in terms of priority, it has been decided that, following the 1982/83 school year, we will discontinue the Scholarship.

It has been a pleasure and a privilege for the Eaton family to have been involved in your program these many years and to assist students of high calibre in their educational training and in the pursuit of their careers.

We realize this decision will be disappointing to your school but, we are sure you will recognize a need for changes in our programs to meet today's heavy demands.

Yours very truly,

Frank F. McEachren
